

There is no legitimate reason for the FCC to stifle satellite programming. With any luck, the ultra-conservative administration will get the boot come this November and the Puritanical FCC regime will go with it. Do yourselves a favor and go back to dealing with the issues of bandwidth for which the FCC was established for in the first place.